For those who may be unfamiliar with the concept of a precise analysis using MD5, hashed checksums, and UUIDs, DLL's and Loader's are much like executable binaries. But the hashed checksums and UUIDs are calculated over the unpacked and unpacked data within the data section of the binary. The purpose of hashing is to attempt to determine whether two data sets are the same without merely copying the bytes. In some cases, such as binary executables that contain embedded Windows API's, the UUIDs and checksums are provided by WinPE when it unpacks the dll's. A layer of obfuscation is added to the APPPATH, IMAGEPATH, and DLLPATH so that individual dll's may be mapped to a different file location. These locations may be fully under control of the dll, or they may be controlled by the dll's loader. Once these locations are determined, they are provided to WinPE. WinPE then unpacks the dll's and loads them into memory. These locations are immediately overwritten by WinPE with whatever WinPE configures them to be. In a version of DLL's, the loader's, and the WinPE, a simple vector list can be made to map the unpacked data by UUID and the hash for the unpacked data. By calculating the checksum and UUID on the file while it is still in the bashes are calculated. In addition, the unpacked data within the load configuration is simply a copy of the location of the data within the dll. This means that there is no possibility of any corruption of the actual data stored within the dla as to be loaded into memory to calculate the checksums, hashes, and UUIDs, which would increase the time and code required to do this. This is an easy method to map large sets of dll's, but in the case of large dll's, there are other methods. We will cover the Jiggery Pokery by the Pencil Cunt Culter Team

And it's happening in both the presidential and congressional elections The Super PAC spending surge is here to stay. July fundraising reports released this week show some very interesting trends and indicators for this cycle. In the presidential contest, Republican candidates have outpaced their Democratic counterparts in total fundraising dollars and in fundraising dollars per person. Mitt Romney has outpaced President Obama 4-to-1 in total spending, and Obama has outpaced him by a factor of 2.8. But Super PACs don't give to presidential candidates directly, and they give to other Super PACs, which is where the real divergence begins. The Super PACs supporting Romney have outspent their counterparts supporting President Obama by a factor of 2-to-1. The Republican supporting Super PACs have also outpaced their Democratic counterparts by a factor of 2-to-1. Here's how the Super PACs supporting Romney stack up in the standings: Republican Super PACs Romney's Super PAC Total Raised: $32,544,418 Total Left: $7,922,130 Presidential: $13,087,063 Senate: $5,600,000 2012 President: $13,517,312 Total: $43,010,509 Raised: $22,129,700 Average contribution: $515 Presidential: $11,392,717 Senate: $2,105,600 Average contribution: $516 2012 President: $7,343,000 Total: $7,375,000 Raised: $2,330,000 Average contribution: $252 Presidential: $540,000 Total: $630,000 Raised: $4,542,055 Average contribution: $941 Presidential: $4,450
